The Ferris-Haggarty Mine and Boston & Wyoming Smelter

Apr 15, 5-6 pm
Given by Mark Danniinger. The Ferris-Haggarty Mine and the related Boston & Wyoming Smelter were located in the Encampment, Wyoming area and supplied copper for the burgeoning electrification of the United States. The mine and smelter were the only sizeable copper operations in Wyoming in the history of the state, operating from the 1890's until 1907. It is a remarkable story of determination and optimism which resulted in a successful albeit short-lived mining and processing operation in a remote location.
